Courant says of this gifted lady:

" * * Miss Cayvan's audience was one of the largest of the course. It was, from beginning to end, a thoroughly delighted audience, thrilled by turns and again deeply moved by some exquisite shade of pathos, or convalsed with merriment. * * In all she was a thorough artist, always giving the hearer a notion of repressed power, never exaggerating, but keeping inside the excess of expression. * * It was an exquisitely delightful entertainment, pure, natural, and consequently full of fascination. We said that the secret of Miss Cayvan's success was careful training. We had forgotten one thing: that one thing is genuis."

The New Haren Ice Company commenced cutting at Whitney Lake in the morning, and by the middle the afternoon their large houses just above the dam showed that good work had been done, several hundred tons being housed. Some twenty or thirty men were busy receiving the cakes and stowing them away. The ice was being cut above the covered bridge, about a quarter of a mile off, where the ice is from eight to ten inches in thickness. Death of Cornelius Jay DuBois. Cornelius Jay DuBois was born in the city of New York August 30th, 1836. He was graduated at the Columbia College Law School in 1861, and was shortly after admitted to practice in the Supreme Court. On the 19th of April, 1861, he marched to Washington with the Seventh New York regiment, as a building is limited, by the proposition now member of Co. K of this celebrated corps, and in 1862 went with this same regiment to $115,000. Baltimore. Upon his return he recruited at New Haven, Company D of the Twentyseventh regiment of Conn. Vols., and as captain of the same he joined the Army of the Potomac. It will be remembered that when this regiment was captured in Virginia, Co. D was one of the two companies which escaped capture and thus saved the colors. He served in Took's brigade, under Hancock, at Aquia Creek, Falmouth, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. At the battle of Gettysburg, July 2d, 1863, he received a severe wound from which he never fully recovered. He was indeed supposed to be among the killed, but a rother, then serving as assistant surgeon on deneral Mead's staff, fortunately found him, ressed his wound, and had him conveyed to his friends in New York. His spirited conduct at Gettysburg attracted the notice of Gen. Hancock, who sent word to his father in New Haven "that he had never seen a more gallant charge." Col. Brooks also sent word to the family "that there was not a more gallant soldier in the army than Capt. DuBois." As soon as he was partially recovered from s wound, he went to Georgia as Adjutant of the 20th Conn., serving under Hooker and also in Sherman's division of the 20th army corps. At the battle of Resaca, when the regiment was ordered to storm a strong position of the enemy, and the men, partly up the hill, began to waver under the heavy fire, rallied the men, and at their head planted the colors on the summit. A letter, at the time, from a fellow officer to his parents describing this gallant action, was published.

In July, 1866, he took the degree of M. D. in the Yale Medical College, and has, with some intervals of absence, spent abroad for the benefit of his health, continued to reside in New Haven up to the time of his death in New Haven up to the time of his death, practicing his profession for a part of the time, until his increasing ill health prevented.

During the greater part of his life Dr. Dubois had been a great sufferer, scarcely knowing what it was to have a well day. Though small of frame and a confirmed invalid, he made up in pluck and endurance what he saleaked in physical strength and muscle. Few of his men could equal him on a long and rapid march, or better bear the hardships of picket duty, on which service he was frequently detailed on account of his vigilant and wiry nature. Upon the now famous march of in nature. Upon the now famous march of the Seventh New York regiment, the little, the Seventh New York regiment, the little, high strung invalid, carrying a musket and equipments almost as heavy as himself, outwalked and outlasted the strongest and hardlest men. He received from the President of the United States the brevet of major for "distinguished bravery" at the battle of Gettysburg, and that of lieutenant colonel for "gallant conduct" at Resaca. After the war he received the brevet rank of colonel from the Governor of Connecticut. Though of a nervous and excitable temperament, he was always cool and collected in the ment, he was always cool and collected in the presence of danger, (to which he was not indifferent,) but in every emergency he was resolute in the performance of his duty and fearless in action. The soubriquet of "the dare

The Talk About a New Trial—What the Lawyers Say.

Judge Harrison was in New York vester—

Judge Harrison was in New York yesterday, and Mr. Zacher, his associate, stated that there was no possibility of a new trial at once, so far as he knew. This re-trial has all along been contemplated by the public to be impracticable unless in the event of a discovery of new evidence, and this discovery no one claims. The frank assertion by Judge Harrison that it was not probable that a jury could be obtained at present who would either acquit or convict the accused, remains an objection now as much as when it was uttered.

Mr. Jones of Hartford, of Mr. Hayden's counsel, says there is no truth in the report.

State Attorney Waller informs the New Lodon Telegram that he had not been advised of a new trial and doubts if it has been deciddent occurred, which for a moment created ed on. Mr. Waller will probably appear for the State in the new trial. Hayden is still at large on bail of $5,000. He is in Hartford, overseeing the preparation of his auto-

An Old Confidence Game

The Rogue and his Pal in the Lock-Yesterday a man by the name of Silas Carrington came to this city from Bristol for the purpose of selling cider. In his perambulations about town he fell in with George Mun son, who is well known among the sporting fraternity in this city, and Edward Glasheill, who halls from Providence, R. I. Munson volunteered to show Carrington where he could sell some cider, and the trio started for the billiard room in the building corner of Church and Crown streets. In going up the Additional acknowledgments for the Seams of the Cars at the chute opposite the depot; the sairs, Munson, who was slightly in advance, dropped an ordinary playing card, which had been previously folded up, inside being placed a three cent piece. It is a singular fact that whilst the ice in the covers is 12 inches or more thick, on the main post it is but from 1½ to 4 inches in thickness, so that some of the way it is necessary to build a plank walk to support the weight of the workmen. Tuesday, thirty-six car loads were cut, floated, loaded and shipped to the barges at Bridgeport. Forty-five men were another three cent piece was disclosed. The dear was disclosed. But the old farmer would not have it; he held on until Officer Beegan arrived and then handed over his prisoner to him. Glasheill was taken to the station house. him. Glasheill was taken to the station house and locked up after the money had been taken from him. Munson escaped at the time, but This is an old confidence game that used to be played a greal deal on countrymen in New York and other cities, and it is surprising that any one should be duped in this way at the present day. The lighthouse inspector reports that the lens apparatus of the Saybrook lighthouse has been injured by an accident. It will be repaired as soon as practicable, but in the meantime about one-half the horizon will be imperfectly illuminated.

Mr. DeForest of Middlebury, Mr. Bailey of Danbury, Mr. Clarke of Chester, Mr. Pember of Vernon, Mr. Mitchell of New Britsin, Mr. Hollister of Litchfield, and others spoke on the question.

Mr. Gardner, of Derby, offered an amendment to the resolution submitted by the majority of the committee, bringing the issue on the legality of the vote found in the wrong box.

He said he was sorry the committee had not reported that there was no election in the lown of Haddam November 4. It would show every town in the Estate the danger of alip-shod management in elections. The double-headed ballot-box used by the voters was unfit for such purposes. But as it was used, the two ends of the box must be considered as distinct as though they were in opposite corners of the room. Now, one clicket for Representative was found in the Senatorial box. By the laws of the State, under no circumstances could this ballot be counted. The House, irrespective of party, should place itself on record in support of the election laws. The question of residence would come up after the proposed amendment had been voted upon.

The wave seems bound to come. It has struck the western cities first, but it will eventually have to be felt over the country. In Chicago in some localities real estate to-day is actually higher than it was in the previous flush times, and Kansas City, St. Louis and other places also already report noticeable improvement. We are not dead yet. The same report comes to us from New York, where there are parties daily picking up good desirable pieces of real property upon which they expect to realize a handsome profit.
